Not illustrated. 1886 Excerpt: . cells are twenty-five by twenty-one and same heighth as the others, having three windows and a grated door to the men s cells and solid door and same amount of windows to the women s cells each heated by a large stove. The men s cells are furnished with water closets and hydrant, having a liberal supply of water, and with the contemplated improvements at this place, I think the water supply will be unlimited. There is also in the prison building a large bath room and dining room. The former is provided with three tanks eight by ten feet, and supplied with hot water during the cold weather. The hospital and kitchen are in separate buildings, the former is some distance from the cells and consist of one large ward holding fourteen beds, and provided with water closet and hydrant, a medicine room, bath room, dining room, kitchen and hospital steward s room. The average number of convicts at this place are about 230. These consist of about 12 white men, 204 negro men, 4 white women and 10 negro women. The women are used for cook ing, washing, mending clothes, keeping the prison and yard in order and sometimes working on the farm. Of the above average number of men about 85 work outside of the mine, the balance work inside of the mine. The convicts here are in good condition and I think would bear favorable comparison with those of any other...
