Application of the law of mass action.--Thus far we have only considered the equilibrium which is attained after the reaction has come to rest, i.e., after the two sides bear a constant relation to one another. The question now arises as to the progress of a reaction toward this state, and the factors upon which the time necessary to attain it depends. By aid of the law of mass action, it is possible to find an answer to both portions of this question. Since chemical action at any time, according to it (p. 238), is proportional, for constant temperature, to the active masses of the substances present, i.e., to those portions which are free to act, then, when we have two substances reacting, the concentrations being  $a$  and  $a_2$  moles per liter,  $\frac{dx}{dt} = k(a - x)(a_2 - x)$ , where  $x$  is the fraction of a mole of each which decomposes in the time  $t$ . The term  $k$  in this equation is known as the speed constant of the reaction, and is constant at any one temperature for any value of  $x$  in the reaction in question. Suppose we have the reversible reaction  $A + A_2 \rightleftharpoons A_2 + A$ , which after a time attains a state of equilibrium in which all four products are present. The relative amounts of these are dependent upon the value of  $K_c$ ...
