Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Methods of Classifying the Lactic-Acid Bacteria The grouping of bacteria according to their action on any one specific substance usually brings together bacteria related in that one characteristic only but entirely unrelated in other respects. It is, however, sometimes convenient from a technical standpoint to group bacteria in this way. The bacteria concerned in the souring of milk have been so grouped for so long that many people have come to consider them as a division by themselves and their relation to other bacteria has been little considered. The bacteria taking part in the souring of milk may be readily divided into four general groups. Group I includes those bacteria which sour milk without peptonization or gas formation; they grow poorly on artificial media and fail to liquefy gelatin. Morphologically they show some variation, usually appearing as a coccus or very short bacillus in pairs or in chains of varying lengths. The bacteria of this group are the ones ordinarily designated as the lactic-acid bacteria and have been described under various names. They have a...
