Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Good English Oral and Written, Vol. 1 This book is intended for use in the third and fourth years of the elementary school. The authors believe that children speak and write for the same reason that adults do to tell something that is in their minds, something related to their own experiences, something that has a note of personal interest or preference or opinion. Therefore, the material on which conversation and written exercises are based has been selected with reference to its living interest to children and its vital relation to their experiences. This material, moreover, has had thorough test in the classroom. It is now generally agreed that children learn to speak and write interestingly and effectively by speaking and writing under proper inspiration and guidance. Something to say and someone to say it to - an interesting subject and an interested audience - are prime requisites for growth of language power. In this, moreover, oral speech holds first claim on the attention of the school, because we speak more than we write. Throughout this text the authors have held clearly in mind these fundamental principles. The book is divided into approximately one hundred fifty carefully planned lessons, for each years work. These lessons are grouped into chapters, each composed of a series of related exercises that center about a common theme, and are intended to provide work for a school month. The lessons for each chapter, therefore, are not haphazard and miscellaneous, but are woven together into a purposeful whole, closing with a review of all the language facts treated during the month.
